Direct speech

Remember our little rhyme to help us remember how to punctuate speech correctly.

“Kay come and have a look at the beautiful roses with me,” asked Gerda as she ran into Kay’s house.

“Lets make spy holes on the window,” suggested Kay with a cheeky smile.

Skills work – Adverbs

Context Kay and Gerda

Happily, Kay and Gerda read their books in the summer.

Sneakily, they made spy holes on the frosty glass in winter.

Snugly, they cocooned themselves in soft wool blankets by the fire.

Kay and Gerda were the closest of friends, who were lucky enough to live right next door to each other and share a small roof top garden. Although their houses were cramped, they were cosy and both Kay and Gerda were loved. In winter, they would sit snuggled close to the warm, roaring fire. Happily, they would roll a woollen ball for the large, ginger cat until he became sleepy. Kay and Gerda did not have expensive toys, just a few simple play things like a marble, a toy musical monkey and a little spinning wheel. When it was so cold that the windows frosted over, they would warm coins with their breath and hold them to the window creating little spy holes to look at the people outside.
